A Yorkshire Philosophical Society evening lecture

Bats, Bees and Blooms

Joint lecture with the Royal Geographical Society and PLACE A presentation and discussion by PLACE on some of the wildlife of York on Tuesday November 20th 7.30pm at the Tempest Anderson Hall of the Yorkshire Museum

Bob Missin, Countryside Officer City of York Council, will speak about The Wildflowering of York, looking at the what and how of achieving the enhancement of the floral diversity of York's greenspaces and proposals for the future. Michael Archer will consider The small landscape for solitary wasps and bees, how wasps and bees find a home and food in urban York. Finally, Nancy Irwin, of the University of York, will look at Bats and Flowers and the importance of improving the diversity of habitats to help sustain bat populations.

Free for members. £3 donation from non-members. No advance booking.
