From Cave to Cosmos
A history of the Yorkshire Philosophical Society

Founded in 1822, the Yorkshire Philosophical Society has continuously provided a range of activities to promote the public understanding of science and now reaches its bicentenary, flourishing as a learned society open to everyone. This new book explores the ideas and scientists forming part of this distinguished history, from William “Strata” Smith, Professor John Phillips, and George Cayley to Tempest Anderson and then Mary Kitson Clark and on to contemporary scientists. Alongside the physical gift to the citizens of York of the Museum Gardens, the Yorkshire Museum, St Mary’s Abbey, the Multangular Tower and the Hospitium, this book celebrates the work of the Society’s indefatigable members over the last two hundred years.

This book is a “not-for-profit” bicentenary project by the Yorkshire Philosophical Society with both the author and other Society members involved in the project contributing their time and expertise on an entirely voluntary basis.

All orders will be acknowledged.
